

Poissant Baptism, Marriage & Burial Acts in England

The revocation of the Edict of Nantes in October 1685 by Louis XIV, the grandson of Henry IV, drove an exodus of Protestants from France.

I have indicated whom I believe I have found in London, and who had already died by then. The remainder attended St Pierre Catholic Church and were baptized, married and buried there. There were many of these acts up to 1709 but I have scanned the registers up to 1730 and only found a few of them. I assume that they all moved somewhere else. Even the Catholic Poissants have diminished a lot.
